

SHAKESPEARIENCE!

Swords, Scenes & Soliloquies

R O M E O & J U L I E T

Closing Ensemble Soliloquy

1. This letter doth make good
2. the friar's words,
3. Their course of love,
4. the tidings of her death:
5. And here he writes
6. that he did buy a poison
7. Of a poor 'pothecary,
8. and therewithal
9. Came to this vault to die,
10. and lie with Juliet.
11. Where be these enemies?
12. Capulet!
13. Montague!
14. See, what a scourge
15. is laid upon your hate,
16. That heaven finds means
17. to kill your joys
18. with love.
19. And I for winking at
20. your discords too
21. Have lost a brace
22. of kinsmen:
23. all are punish'd.
24. A glooming peace
25. this morning with it brings;
26. The sun, for sorrow,
27. will not show his head:
28. Go hence,
29. to have more talk
30. of these sad things;
31. Some shall be pardon'd,
32. and some punished:
33. For never was a story
34. of more woe

FULL COMPANY: Than this of Juliet and her Romeo.
